Japanese vegetarian dishes

Tempura- deep fried vegetables in batter

Ukemono or Japanese pickled vegetables are an essential part of a Japanese meal and are always included in set meals.

Miso soup (often with tofu and green onions) is part of every set meal including breakfast. Chopsticks are used to eat the ingredients and the broth is sipped directly from the bowl.

Zaru Soba- Cold soba (buckwheat) noodles are popular in the summer served on a bamboo tray with nori seaweed, spring onion, wasabi

Okonomiyaki is a type of Japanese savoury pancake. It is usually made with egg so please try the ones only at vegan restaurants.

Nasu dengaku- This classic Japanese side dish consists of grilled eggplant cut into slices and coated with a delicious, rich miso glaze.

Veg Sushi- lots of sushi in Japan is vegetarian. Look out for treats such as kappa maki (cucumber rolls), takuan maki (pickled daikon rolls) and inarizushi (rice stuffed inside deep-fried tofu pockets).

Vegetarian onigiri- Triangular onigiri rice balls are a quintessential Japanese snack, and several of them are vegetarian. Keep an eye out for ones filled with kombu seaweed, umeboshi (pickled plum), and natto (fermented soybeans).

Vegetarian ramen

Veg udon noodles

Veg gyoza (veg momos)

Mochi- Wonderfully chewy and stretchy, mochi rice cakes are made from pounded steamed rice and often stuffed with sweet bean paste. You can find all kinds of delicious varieties, from sticky sakura mochi to strawberry daifuku mochi, each made with entirely plant-based ingredients.

Wagashi- More like works of art than food, wagashi sweets are an unmissable Japanese treat.

Traditionally made with only plant-based ingredients such as bean paste, they're beautifully crafted in the shape of flowers and other stunning designs. For a truly authentic experience, enjoy them with a cup of matcha tea!

Mobile Connectivity while in Japan

There are 4 main SIM Card providers in Japan, but I would recommend NTT Docomo for better coverage

- The best place to buy a sim card is at the airport kiosks
- You can also buy it at a convenience store
- Even if you do not purchase an international roaming plan for your current India number, remember to activate roaming so that you receive messages (important for things like OTPs).

Emergency Numbers

Here are few numbers to keep handy while in Japan

- 110: Police
- 119: Ambulance

Getting around in Japan.

- Osaka- metro pass is Rs 358 for 24 hr, Rs 660 for 48 hrs. below 5s are free.
- For Tokyo, we can look at city passes for getting around. Per head prices- 24 hr ticket is Rs. 440, 48hr ticket is Rs. 650. Free for below 5s.
- For Kyoto, you can purchase the 1 day subway + bus pass, available for purchase at metro stations.
- Alternatively you can buy a prepaid Icosa/Suica/Pasmo card from the airport for local travel (railways/buses/subways) in all Japanese cities.
The ICOCA Card costs ¥2,000, which includes ¥1,500 in preloaded value and a ¥500 deposit that you can get back when you return the card at the end of your trip.
Suica card also has refundable deposit.
Pasmo doesn't have refundable deposit.
You can recharge the card from automated ticket machines, charge machines, and fare adjustment machines inside ticket gates and even convenience stores.
Your current credit balance will be displayed on a small screen when you pass through ticket gates or make a payment at a store. Additionally, you can check your balance and view your usage history at ticket machines.
We would suggest to read through the following article to understand how to use it
