Famous Dishes in Gangtok and Darjeeling

- Thukpa – Tibetan Noodle Soup
- Momos- Tibetan-style dumplings
- Sel Roti- A traditional homemade, ring-shaped rice doughnut that's sweet and commonly served during festivals.
- Chang is a locally made alcoholic beverage made from millet, rice, barley, or buckwheat. It has a strong and distinctive flavour that varies depending on the ingredients used. It is usually served hot in clay cups and consumed during festivals or special occasions. Chang has an alcohol content of about 15% to 20%, which makes it quite potent
- Shah-Paley is a Sikkim-style meat patty made from minced meat, spices, and herbs. It is deep-fried until golden and crispy and served with chutneys or sauces. It is a filling and satisfying dish that can be enjoyed as a snack or a main course. Shah-paley comes in different flavors, such as chicken shah-paley or fish shah-paley but there are also vegetarian versions.
- Churrpi- A soup made of cotton cheese, this is one of the traditional street foods in Gangtok.
- Thentuk- a Tibetan soup made of It can be made with chicken, meat, wheat or even just veggies
- Masaurya Curry is a very popular local dish in all of Sikkim. It looks like a ball and the main ingredient that forms the curry is fermented black gram. Taken mostly with rice or bread, the flavors in the curry salivate your taste buds well. As with other street foods of Gangtok, Masaurya Curry is generously seasoned with spices.
- Shimi Ko Achar- A popular food served on the plates of street hawkers in Gangtok, the dish is a pickle made from string bean called Shimi. To enhance the taste, sesame seeds, green chilies and lemon juice are added for spiciness and sourness. It is best served with Sel Roti or other breads.
- Sishnu soup is a typical Himalayan cuisine. The dish is also infused with boiled nettle leaves, garlic flakes and other flavors that make for a rich soup
- Chambray - another tasty dish that originates from Nepal that is best served with rice. What we traditionally call vegetable biryani, chambray served with rice is called Pulao and just tastes fabulous with Aloo Tilko.
- Kinema- Often consumed as a meat substitute in Gangtok markets, Kinema is a fermented soybean product. The dish originated from Limbuwan – present-day eastern Nepal, parts of Sikkim and Kalimpong. Kinema is either cooked into tasty soup and consumed with rice or it can also be used as a dip with bread. It is one of the top choices for breakfast in Gangtok.
- Kodo Ko Roti- Another Gangtok street food which is highly inspired from Nepal, it is a millet bread. A typical pancake, usually served with finger tomato pickle can also be eaten with other notified pickles. It is black in color and although looks hard in nature, has, indeed a soft texture.
- Laphing- Laphing is a spicy, cold mug bean noodle dish with soy sauce. A bit salty, a tad sour, and very spicy
- Aloo Dum- spicy potato curry that is a staple of Nepali cuisine
