Famous Veg Dishes in Singapore

- Vegan Chicken Rice- aromatic ginger-infused rice, ‘chicken’ made of soybean or wheat gluten and the highlight, a tangy garlicky chilli dip
- Thunder Tea Rice- White rice, blanched or lightly stir-fried vegetables and peanuts are served with the star of the dish, a herb-infused tea soup.
- Prata- Roti prata is fried flatbread, and good ones are both crispy and fluffy. Ask for ‘prata kosong’ which means plain prata and let them know you do not eat egg.
- Vegetarian bee hoon- Singaporean noodle dish that contains vegetarian spring rolls, fried tofu skin, and mock meats made from gluten. It also comprises of white rice noodles that are either thick or thin in texture.
- Stir fried Kai lan- It refers to Chinese broccoli, that is stir-fried and then tossed with a little oil to give it a smooth glossy sheen.
- Rojak- An eclectic medley of fruits and vegetables drenched in a sweet, sour and sometimes spicy, tamarind sauce
- Char Kway Teow- Silky smooth flat rice noodles and crunchy vegetables are wok-fried in dark soy sauce over high heat for a charred, smoky aroma

- Laksa- The curry laksa is popular here and filled to the brim with tofu, mushrooms, konjac mock seafood and loads of beansprouts.
- Kueh- colourful cakes and desserts that are soft, slightly chewy and sticky. They are made with common ingredients like rice, coconut, palm sugar and tapioca starch.
- Fried Spring roll- crispy spring rolls that are deep fried and have a strong flavour of turnip, carrots and cabbage.
- Chendol- sweet, icy and coconutty dessert that is made with coconut milk, palm sugar and shaved ice. It also contain green, jelly noodles made with rice flour.
- Bandung- chilled drink that is made with condensed milk and rose cordial syrup, giving it a pink colour.
- Popiah- fresh spring rolls stuffed with veggies wrapped in thin rice sheets. It is best served with a sweet sauce (often a bean sauce) or hot chilli sauce.
- Tau Huay- silken beancurd custard that is slightly more set than typical custard
- Red bean buns- Red bean paste is a popular sweet and moreish filling for many bread-type of desserts. Pancakes, buns and waffles can be stuffed with this paste, which has a thick, reddish-black colour.
- Potato curry puff- The humble curry puff is a popular snack which is vegetarian-friendly.
