Must-Try Dishes in South Korea

- Kimchi: The undisputed cornerstone of Korean cuisine! This spicy, fermented cabbage (and sometimes other vegetables like radish) is more than just a side dish; it's a cultural staple.
- Bibimbap: Meaning "mixed rice," bibimbap is a visually stunning and incredibly satisfying dish. A bowl of warm white rice is topped with a colorful array of sautéed and seasoned vegetables (namul), gochujang (chili pepper paste), often a fried egg and sliced meat (usually beef), so ask for chicken/seafood variations
- Japchae: A delightful dish of glass noodles (dangmyeon) made from sweet potato starch, stir-fried with a variety of colorful vegetables (like carrots, onions, spinach, and mushrooms) and thinly sliced beef or pork, all tossed in a savory and slightly sweet soy sauce-based sauce with sesame oil.
- Tteokbokki: Spicy stir-fried rice cakes! These chewy cylinder-shaped rice cakes (tteok) are simmered in a vibrant gochujang-based sauce along with fish cakes (eomuk), scallions, and sometimes boiled eggs or ramen noodles (ramyeon). Tteokbokki ranges in spiciness and is a quintessential Korean street food, perfect for a quick, satisfying, and fiery bite
- Sundubu Jjigae: Soft tofu stew! This fiery and comforting stew features silky soft tofu (sundubu) simmered in a spicy broth made with gochujang or gochugaru, vegetables, mushrooms, and often seafood or meat. A raw egg is usually cracked into the bubbling stew just before serving, adding richness and creaminess. It's typically served piping hot with a bowl of rice.
- Doenjang Jjigae: Fermented soybean paste stew! This hearty and savory stew is made with doenjang (Korean fermented soybean paste), tofu, vegetables (like zucchini, potatoes, and onions), and often mushrooms or seafood. Doenjang has a deep, earthy, and umami flavor that forms the base of this comforting and nutritious stew, a staple in Korean households.
- Pajeon: Scallion pancake! A savory pancake made primarily with scallions, bound together by a batter of eggs and wheat flour. Variations can include seafood (haemul pajeon), kimchi (kimchijeon), or meat
- Kimchijeon: Kimchi pancake! Made with chopped kimchi, wheat flour batter, and sometimes other vegetables or meat.

- Haemul Pajeon: seafood and scallion pancake! A more elaborate version of pajeon, featuring a variety of seafood such as shrimp, squid, and mussels mixed into the scallion and batter base.
- Naengmyeon: Cold buckwheat noodles! This refreshing dish is especially popular during summer. Thin and chewy buckwheat noodles are served in a chilled, tangy, and slightly sweet broth, often with sliced cucumber, pickled radish, a boiled egg, and sometimes slices of cold beef or pear. There are two main variations: mul naengmyeon (water naengmyeon) with a clear broth and bibim naengmyeon (mixed naengmyeon) tossed in a spicy gochujang-based sauce.
- Jajangmyeon: Black bean noodles! A Korean-Chinese noodle dish featuring thick wheat noodles topped with a savory black bean sauce
- Ramyeon: Black bean noodles! A Korean-Chinese noodle dish featuring thick wheat noodles topped with a savory black bean sauce
- Gimbap :ns Korean seaweed rice rolls! Similar in appearance to Japanese sushi rolls, gimbap consists of steamed white rice and various fillings such as seasoned vegetables, pickled radish, spinach, egg, and processed meat or tuna, all rolled in dried seaweed sheets
- Hotteok: Sweet Korean pancakes! These are made from a dough filled with a sweet mixture of brown sugar, cinnamon, and chopped nuts, then pan-fried until golden brown and slightly crispy on the outside and chewy and gooey on the inside
- Eomuk: Fish cakes! Processed fish cakes are skewered and simmered in a flavorful broth, often served with a cup of the warm broth. It's a popular and inexpensive street food, especially enjoyable during colder weather.
- Twigim: Korean fried snacks! A variety of foods are battered and deep-fried, including vegetables (like sweet potato, peppers, and onions), shrimp, squid, and even gimbap. Twigim is crispy and flavorful, often enjoyed with a soy sauce-based dipping sauce.

Souvenir Shopping Guide

South Korea is a shopper's paradise! Here are the top souvenir ideas:

- Korean Skincare & Cosmetics: Available in Myeongdong and Olive Young stores nationwide.
- K-pop Merchandise: Head to the underground shopping mall at COEX or Hongdae.
- Traditional Crafts: Visit Insadong for hanji (paper crafts), mother-of-pearl boxes, and celadon pottery as well as traditional hand fans.
- Local Snacks: Grab honey butter chips, market tteok (rice cakes), and Korean seaweed.
- Cute Stationery: Check out ARTBOX for quirky Korean designs.
- Korean Tea: Found in supermarkets. Popular teas include daechu, ginseng, barley and brown rice tea.
- Soju: Traditional Korean alcohol which can be found in supermarkets

💡 Tips: Always ask for a tax-free receipt if your purchase is over KRW 30,000. Haggle politely at street markets.
